Market position

Masan Group is one of the leading corporations in Vietnam, with a consumer-centric platform of products and services. The company has built an integrated ecosystem spanning consumer goods manufacturing, financial services, distribution, and retail through subsidiaries such as Masan Consumer, Masan MEATLife, Techcombank, Masan high-tech materials and the retail chain WinCommerce.

Masan’s unique business model is based on a “closed-loop consumer value chain” and the “Point of Life” concept, creating a deeply integrated ecosystem that serves consumers’ essential daily needs.

The strong linkage among its business segments enables Masan to control the entire supply chain, optimize costs, and improve operational efficiency.

Financial performance

The total operating income (TOI) growth of Techcombank during the 2020–2025 period experienced significant fluctuations, especially with a sharp decline of -1.51% in 2022. However, the bank showed a strong recovery in the following years, indicating that its business operations gradually stabilized and continued to expand. At the same time, ROEA and ROAA remained relatively stable, reflecting the bank’s effective management of assets and capital sources.

Meanwhile, EPS, after reaching a peak of VND 5,736, declined to VND 3,567, showing a downward trend in earnings available to common shareholders. Although NIM decreased from 5.63% to 3.5% due to interest rate pressure and rising funding costs, the CAR and NPL ratios were still well controlled, demonstrating the bank’s solid capital foundation and effective risk management capability.

TIME HORIZON

SUITABLE FOR MEDIUM- TO LONG-TERM INVESTMENT

(APPROXIMATELY 1–3 YEARS).

Masan Group is considered a domestic consumption-driven growth stock, supported by its integrated consumer and retail ecosystem strategy. However, investors should be prepared for short-term volatility due to restructuring activities and strong industry competition.

Business model

RISK TOLERANCE

Moderate to high level of risk.

Market risk remains moderate, while business risk is relatively high due to Masan’s aggressive investments in retail and consumer value chains, where cost fluctuations and intense competition are significant challenges.

Financial and macroeconomic risks are also moderate to high because the company’s performance is highly sensitive to economic cycles and domestic consumer spending trends.

Medium- and Long-Term Outlook

Masan Group is expected to maintain stable medium-term growth as revenue and profitability recover after its restructuring period, reflecting the effectiveness of its business transformation strategy.

The retail segment, particularly WinCommerce, is gradually becoming the company’s primary growth driver as store expansion and operational efficiency improvements contribute to higher profit margins.

The development of an integrated consumer-retail ecosystem allows Masan to leverage customer data and increase cross-selling opportunities, thereby supporting long-term growth.

The company’s financial condition is also expected to improve as leverage declines and cash flow strengthens, enhancing valuation potential and the attractiveness of the stock.

However, Masan still faces significant competitive pressure, relatively low retail industry profit margins, and heavy dependence on domestic consumer purchasing power.
