Expansion of Port Capacity

Gemadept Corporation continues expanding its port system through projects such as Nam Đình Vũ Phase 3 and Gemalink Phase 2A. These projects are expected to increase container handling capacity and strengthen the company's position in Vietnam's deep-water port industry.

Growth of Vietnam's Import-Export Activities

Vietnam's rising export-import volume and increasing FDI inflows are expected to support long-term demand for logistics and port services. As global supply chains continue shifting toward Vietnam, GMD is likely to benefit from higher cargo throughput and stronger port utilization.

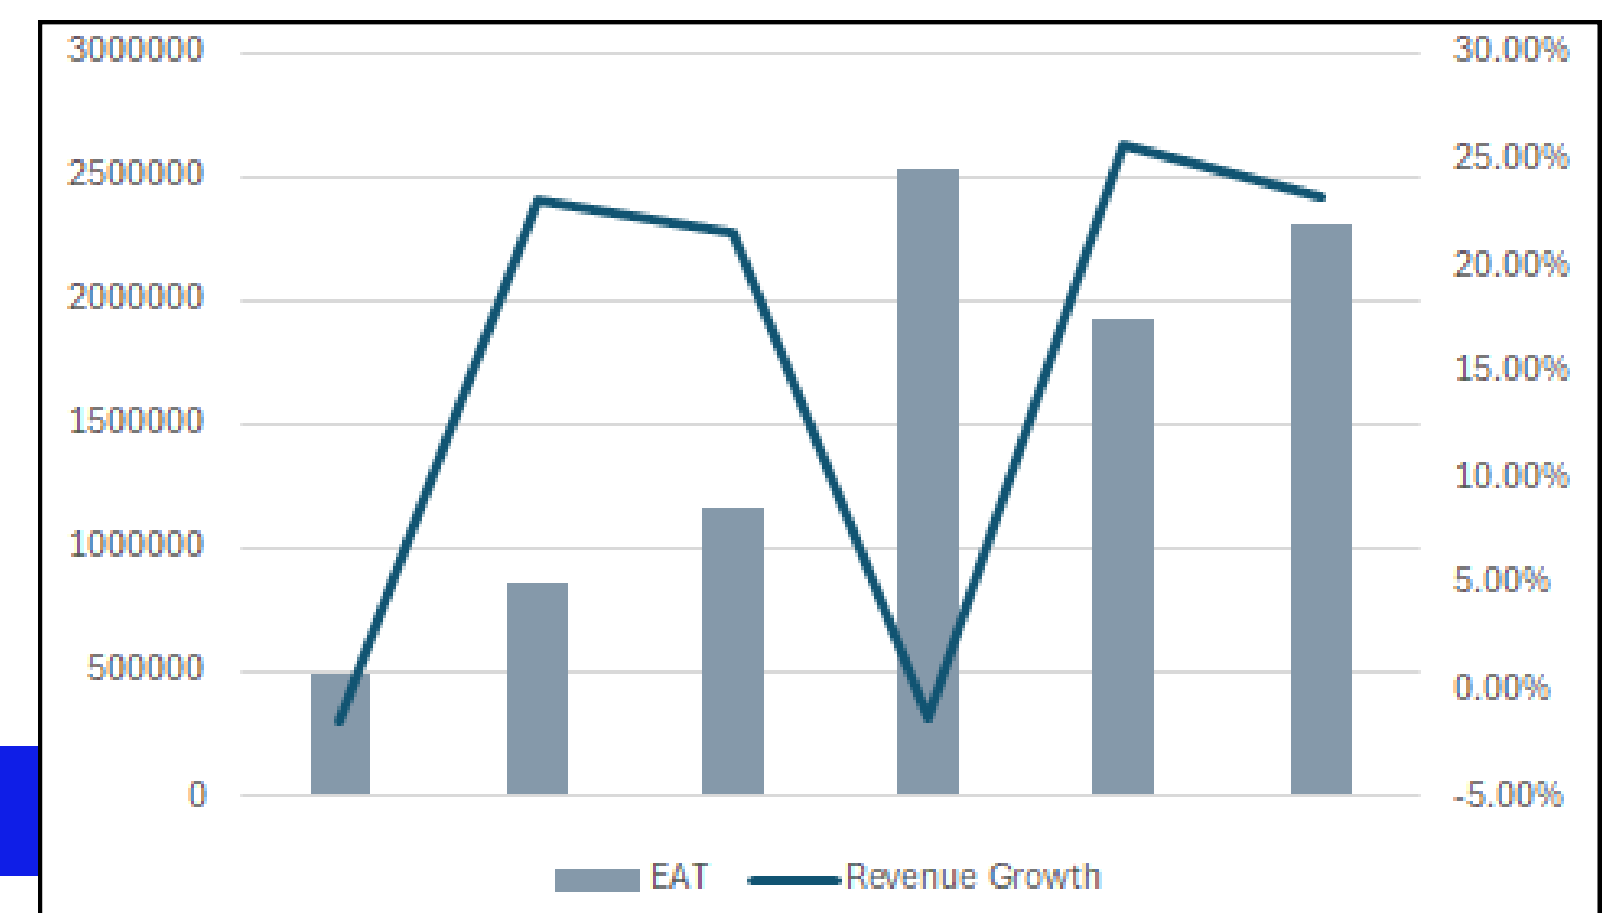

Diversified Logistics Ecosystem

GMD operates an integrated logistics ecosystem including ports, warehousing, transportation, and supply chain services. This diversified business structure helps the company maintain stable revenue streams and improve operational efficiency over the long term.

Market position

Gemadept holds a leading position in Vietnam's port and logistics industry, backed by more than 34 years of operating experience. The owner of the country's largest deep-water port, Gemalink Port — ranked among the Top 19 global commercial ports and capable of accommodating mega vessels of up to 250,000 DWT

The operator of the largest river-port network in Northern Vietnam through the Nam Đình Vũ port complex.

In terms of profitability, ROE improved from 8.98% in 2020 to 19.22% in 2025, while ROA increased from 5.95% to 11.00%. These figures reflect the company's stronger earnings performance, efficient capital utilization, and growth supported by expanding port operations and logistics services.

Business model

RISK TOLERANCE

MEDIUM TO HIGH RISK

TIME HORIZON

MEDIUM TO LONG-TERM INVESTMENT HORIZON

The reason is that port and logistics infrastructure requires time to expand capacity, attract long-term shipping contracts, and fully benefit from Vietnam's trade growth cycle.

3 TO 5-YEAR OR LONGER STRATEGIC HORIZON

In addition, GMD's earnings are closely linked to long-term export-import trends and FDI-driven industrial expansion, making it more appropriate for investors seeking stable growth over a longer period.

Tariff Risk

US tariff rates ranging from 20% to 46% could moderately affect cargo volumes. However, GMD has reduced this risk by diversifying its international shipping network, launching four new service routes to Africa, Europe, Canada, and Brazil since April 2025.

Project Delay Risk

Delays in the Gemalink 2A expansion project due to legal and regulatory procedures represent a high-impact risk. To mitigate this issue, the company continues operating Phase 1 above designed capacity in order to absorb increasing market demand.

Competitive Risk

Competitive pressure from new ports in Lạch Huyện and the large-scale Cái Mép Hạ project is considered low to moderate. This is because GMD benefits from a highly strategic geographic location and maintains strong strategic partnerships with major global shipping lines such as CMA CGM.
